Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 16 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cloudy in far west, but sunny elsewhere. Thunderstorms likely overnight.

Today:
A clear start for most, although lingering cloud in parts of Cornwall and Devon with possible spots of drizzle. The rest of the region seeing sunny or bright and hazy spells into the afternoon. Rather warm. Maximum temperature 24 deg C (75 deg F).

Tonight:
A largely fine evening, bar the lingering cloud and occasional drizzle in the west. Turning muggy as heavy and possibly thundery showers approach late evening. Very heavy at times. Minimum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Thursday:
Heavy showers in the east clear northwards by the late morning, leaving behind a cloudy and cooler day here. Brighter and sunny spells move in from Cornwall throughout the day. Maximum temperature 20 deg C (68 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Breezy and showery on Friday, at times quite heavy with risks of thunderstorms. Drier and brighter Saturday with possible lighter showers. Return of showers and thundery risks on Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.